PETITION FOR AN INDEPENDENT SCIENTIFIC INQUIRY INTO EFFICACY OF ANIMAL EXPERIMENTS

The scientific validity of animal experiments has been questioned by many scientists, doctors and other experts, and is the subject of ongoing and widespread public concern. Around three million animals continue to be experimented on annually in the UK, and these figures are rising. Many animals suffer and die during these experiments.

250 MPs have recently signed up to an Early Day Motion (EDM 92) that calls for an independent scientific evaluation of the use of animals in experiments. Animals Count is calling on you to collect as many signatures as possible in support of this independent scientific enquiry.

We, the undersigned, call upon the Government to facilitate an independent and transparent scientific evaluation of the use of animals as surrogate humans in drug safety testing and medical research and education.
